

What horses have taught me!

Horses have taught me a lot! The most important is that to be your self. You don't have to be a certain shape or size. It does not matter if you have a professional trained horse or not! If you believe in yourself, all that matters. The horses are like you best friend your friendship will last forever!

Whenever you get happy or sad or even mad your horse is always here for you. They told me I can be the boss, but they also told me I have to listen to them. If other people think you are irritating when you talk to them, then talk to your horse. If you are the type that talks on and on, then they will always listen to you. I always talk, and I never stop. My horse will never interrupt me, or tell me to "shut up".

Horses always make my day better. If I watch out and listen to my horses, they are like a new book to me; you never know what to expect. They have taught me that they are like a new chapter and you never know what's going to happen next to your favorite character. With a horse, you can teach them something new everyday; it's like your limit is the sky. Our horses can teach us things that we can't learn by ourselves. My horse is my teacher, but also my friend.

Horses have also taught me responsibility. Taking care of them is a huge responsibility, and I've learned to take care of not only myself, but them as well. Taking care of them has taught me that not everything is about me. They depend on me to take care of them.

Horses also taught me that if I'm doing my best in a show or competition, they will do the best for me. It's not all about the ribbons, it's about having fun! Anyway, ribbons are just something to take up space. My horse is my best prize anyways. My horse and I like to figure out stuff by ourselves. I like to say that we're off to do something that we know, but we always try to do something to make it more fun. Like I said, horses are your best friend, and they'll always be there for you. They are like a never-ending adventure. We bond together as people bond with dogs. The best way to know what your horse thinks is to shut up and listen, and watch their actions and emotions. Horses will always tell you exactly what they feel and why. If you listen to them always, you will have a best friend and someone to talk to whenever you get bored. That's what horses have taught me.
